

Your Community's Participation Map

An effective community invites different levels of participation and the leader needs to create a community design that allows movement between the degree of community participation. Usually, core members who take leadership roles in the community are 10-15% of the total group. Active members who occasionally participate in the community are 15-20% of the total group. Another large portion of community members are peripheral and rarely participate (Wenger et al., 2002).

How about your community's participation? Think about their level of engagement and fill in the map below.
